 - review and vary the price payable by the Customer under the Quotation to the extent permitted by law, if INTERGLASS considers it reasonable to increase those prices to reflect INTERGLASS's then current prices for such Goods (or equivalent Goods), in which case the Customer must pay the difference on demand; and/or
 - supply to the Customer equivalent Goods to those described in the Quotation but which may contain slight variations in design. Such variations will not materially affect the dimensions, operation or appearance of the Goods. INTERGLASS must inform the Customer of such variations at the time of delivery of the Goods.
- vii. If the Customer fails to accept any part of the Goods which INTERGLASS has dispatched in conformity with the Contract and such part of the Goods is returned to INTERGLASS and re-dispatched subsequently, then INTERGLASS may, to the extent permitted by law, require the Customer to pay on demand a charge equal to double the current delivery charge.
